Has your organization discussed starting an oral history project but do not know where to start? Do you have seniors in the community who “carry the town’s history” in their memory? Do you want to enhance your community’s history? Is it finally time to capture the stories before they are lost forever?

If so, here is an opportunity to learn how to organize, implement, and utilize an oral history project from the staff of the Grout Museum who have conducted over 1000 interviews.

There will be demonstration interviews, examples of ‘right and wrong’ practices, and a discussion about the value and use of oral history.

The session will include:

- Project organization and procedures
- Equipment
- Interview organization and techniques
- Post interview processing and archiving
- Editing and distribution
- Resources and funding

Participants will receive both an interview manual and a demo CD.
